ABSTRACT

This bibliography on Central American refugee policy is the outgrowth of a year-long research seminar on the topic at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs of the University of Texas at Austin during 1983-1984. That seminar was concerned with several aspects of Central American refugee policy, including policies of the various Central American governments, the United States, Mexico, and the United Nations. It also looked at issues such as the sanctuary movement and political asylum. Much of the material reflects a Texas focus, in part because Texas has become an important national center for refugee issues. The major sections of the publication include: (1) books, manuscripts, unpublished papers, and church, government and human rights reports; (2) magazine and journal articles; (3) newspaper articles, editorials and statements; (4) newsletters, bulletins, other reports and resources. Within each section, entries are arranged alphabetically first by title (when no author is given), then alphabetically by author. A great number of newspaper articles and editorials are in Spanish, mostly from the Mexico City press, including the major dailies: Excelsior, Unomasuno, and El Dia. Articles from major U.S. newspapers include: New York Times, Washington Post, Los Angeles Times, Miami Herald, Boston Globe, San Diego Union, and Christian Science Monitor. An index by subject and country is included. (ETS)

INTRODUCTION

This bibliography on Central American refugee policy is the outgrowth of a year-long research seminar on the topic at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs of the University of Texas at Austin during 1983-1984. That seminar was concerned with several aspects of Central American refugee policy, including that of the various Central American governments, the United States, Mexico, and the United Nations. It also looked at issues such as the sanctuary movement and political asylum. This bibliography is the first of two publications resulting from that seminar. The second, a detailed policy-oriented background paper, will be published by the LBJ School of Public Affairs later this year.

This bibliography of almost 800 entries includes books, newspaper, magazine and journal articles, unpublished papers, government documents, human rights reports, newsletters and bulletins, and other print material which was gathered by students and faculty during the course of the seminar. The mass of material was sorted, organized, and greatly expanded by Margo Gutiérrez, a Latin American bibliographer.

This is neither a comprehensive nor an exhaustive listing of resources on Central American refugee issues. Although there was an attempt to gather as much information as possible, much of the material reflects a Texas focus. This is due partially to the fact that the students reviewed major Texas dailies, but also because Texas has become an important national center for refugee issues. The sanctuary and underground railroad movements have an important base in Texas, the Immigration and Naturalization Service maintains two detention centers in the state, and Houston has become home for one of the largest Salvadoran communities in the United States. If the news stories were of national importance, it is likely that they were carried by either UPI or AP or by one of the wire services of the WASHINGTON POST or NEW YORK TIMES and should be accessible in local newspapers throughout the U.S. on the same or approximate date.

There are a great number of newspaper articles and editorials in Spanish. The majority of these are from the Mexico City press, including the major dailies, EXCELSIOR, UNOMASUNO, and EL DIA. The decision was made to include Spanish language materials because the presence of Central American refugees in Mexico has proven to be a very important and much discussed policy issue. Articles from major U.S. newspapers such as the NEW YORK TIMES, WASHINGTON POST, LOS ANGELES TIMES, AND MIAMI HERALD are included as well as items from other newspapers such as the BOSTON GLOBE, SAN DIEGO UNION, and CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR.

The major sections of this publication include: 1) books, manuscripts, unpublished papers, and church, government and human rights reports 2) magazine and journal articles 3) newspaper articles, editorials and statements 4) newsletters, bulletins, other reports and resources. Within each section, entries are arranged alphabetically first by title (when there is no author given), then alphabetically by author. The compilers recognize that the organization of this bibliography is not ideal; however there were constraints and limitations due to the computer program selected. To have reorganized the entire bibliography would have delayed publication by several months--at a time when it is most crucial to make these information resources available.

This bibliography is designed for both those engaged in research on Central American issues, and for those involved in the practical day to day concerns of refugee policy. We believe that this publication will be useful to academics, lawyers, journalists, policy makers, and those directly involved in refugee issues.

It is our hope that this publication will provide a jumping-off point for those interested in further investigation. We recommend that the researcher consult, on a regular basis, the following news and indexing sources:

--INFORMATION SERVICES ON LATIN AMERICA (ISLA), a biweekly clipping service which provides photocopies of articles about Latin America from the major U.S. newspapers.

--CENTRAL AMERICA MONITOR, a biweekly compilation of selected English language magazine articles on Central America.

--INFORPRESS CENTROAMERICANA, a weekly clipping service in Spanish which provides in-depth coverage of the region, and CENTRAL AMERICA REPORT, an English language newsletter from the same publisher.

--THIS WEEK IN CENTRAL AMERICA AND PANAMA, a weekly newsletter in English.

--NACLA REPORT ON THE AMERICAS (North American Congress on Latin America), a bulletin on contemporary Latin American issues published six times a year.

--LATIN AMERICAN NEWSLETTERS from London which publishes LATIN AMERICA WEEKLY REPORT, and LATIN AMERICA REGIONAL REPORTS: MEXICO & CENTRAL AMERICA.

--Mexico City daily newspapers, including, EXCELSIOR, THE NEWS, EL DIA, UNOMASUNO, and LA JORNADA.

--Newspaper indexes, including NEW YORK TIMES, WASHINGTON POST, LOS ANGELES TIMES, CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, and the WALL STREET JOURNAL.

--Periodical indexes, including READER'S GUIDE TO PERIODICAL LITERATURE, SOCIAL SCIENCE INDEX, SOCIAL SCIENCE CITATION INDEX, PUBLIC AFFAIRS INFORMATION SERVICE (PAIS), and the HISPANIC AMERICAN PERIODICAL INDEX (HAPI).

--Special publications and reports are often released by such organizations as Americas Watch Committee, Amnesty International, American Friends Service Committee, Church World Service, Oxfam America, National Lawyers Guild, American Civil Liberties Union, and others.

--U.S. government documents which include special reports issued by the General Accounting Office, the Department of State, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, as well as congressional hearings concerned with immigration policy.

For further information on any of the above, consult a librarian. A large selection of the materials listed in this bibliography are available from the Central America Resource Center; contact the Center at (512) 476-9841 for further details.

This publication reflects the combined efforts of the LBJ School of Public Affairs of the University of Texas, and the Central America Resource Center, a nonprofit educational and information center located in Austin. Invaluable technical assistance was provided by Steve Conyers and Michael E. Conroy.

Index by Subject and Country

This index is based on the Central America Resource Center's simplified categorical scheme for its basic library organization and on-line retrieval. The indexing of the entries in this bibliography was undertaken primarily to permit retrieval from among the much larger, much more general Central America Information Bank. The system uses sixteen major categories and ten countries or country-groups, a total of 160 possible country-specific groupings.

The index is presented by major subject heading and by country within each heading. Categories for which the entry would have little meaning here (such as "U.S. Policy" crossed with "United States") have been omitted. The materials collected here have all been selected for their relevance to refugee policy questions, so each subject heading below may be interpreted to mean "refugee policy AND the specific heading."
